DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-38 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent, or on an international application by another who has fulfilled the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of section 371(c) of this title before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent.

Claims 1-38 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being unpatentable by Nishimura et al. (US patent no. 5,631,697).

Re claim 1, Nishimura discloses a method of video processing, comprising extracting a pre-existing overlay present in a video sequence extracting comprising detecting at least one potential overlay in the video sequence (col. 5, line 55 to col. 6, line 55; fig. 3), and verifying that the at least one potential overlay is at least one actual overlay (col. 6, line 56 to col. 7, line 49). In other words, Nishimura teaches an extraction means for extracting an extracted candidate region through a decision that part of an input video signal meeting a predetermined condition is an image of a target object and a decision means for comparing the extracted candidate region extracted by the extraction means and the object region stored in the storage device to decide a new object region and storing the new object region in the storage device. In that, the decision means detects, for example, the overlapping portions of the two regions, decides a new object region which is a size larger than the overlapping portions and provides the new object region. At the same time, the decision means stores the new object region in the storage device to update the contents of the storage device.

Re claims 2-3 and 16, Nishimura teaches post processing at least one actual overlay to remove extraneous pixel and computing a variance for each pixel of the at least one actual overlay; and comparing the variance with a threshold to determine whether or not the pixel should be removed as an extraneous pixel (col. 13, lines 33-63).

Re claims 4, 25, Nishimura teaches detecting comprises the steps of performing wavelet decomposition on the video sequence, extracting features based on the results of the wavelet decomposition, and performing neural network processing on the extracted features (col. 14, lines 1-65).

Re claims 5, 21, Nishimura discloses utilizing three-layer back-propagation neural network processing (figs. 1 and 12a).

Re claims 6, 15, 30, 32-33, Nishimura discloses performing temporal verification and performing spatial verification (col. 2, lines 23-59). In that Nishimura teaches verification in the means of a decision means for comparing the extracted candidate region extracted by the extraction means and the object region stored in the storage device to decide a new object region and storing the new object region in the storage device.

Re claims 7, 17-20, 22-24, 31, 34, and 36-38, Nishimura teaches translating potential overlay over a search range, for each translated version of potential overlay, computing a mean square error in a next video frame of video sequence subsequent to a video frame in which potential overlay is originally detected, determining a minimum of the computed mean square errors for next video frame, and comparing the determined minimum mean square error to a threshold (figs. 13-16).

Re claims 8-14, Nishimura discloses selecting a particular pixel of potential overlay and recording its coordinates and recording the translated coordinates of particular pixel corresponding to determined minimum mean square error (col. 13, line 20 to col.14, line 19).

Re claims 26-29, 31, and 35, the limitations of claims 26-29, 31, and 35 are identical to claims 1-6 above. Therefore, claims 26-29, 31, and 35 are treated the same as discussed with respect to claims 1-6 above.
